However, what people wear can also convey a message about who they are and their role in society. For Example, visit nearly any country in the world and you will notice that young people everywhere are wearing fashionable blue jeans, not for work, but for social occasions such as parties and concerts. The jeans are somewhat of an index of how these young people view themselves: I'm modern and stylish. I'm relaxed and confident. I'm different from the traditional older generation. Jeans make such an important statement that, in some groups, a person might be judged by the brand of jeans he or she is wearing. As a result, some young people feel pressured into spending hundreds of dollars to acquire a single pair of designer jeans just to be in fashion. 61. What is the main idea of the passage? a. People's clothing says a great deal of information about them. b. A young person might spend a few dollars to acquire a pair of designer jeans. c. It's important for young people to wear clothes that are in style. d. Designers differentiate between clothing for young people and older people. 62. The word "acquire" in line 9 is the closest in meaning to ----- . a. gain b. express c. plug d. roll 63. Which sentence is correct? a. Clothing serves many functions beyond just protecting our bodies. b. People put on clothes just to protect their bodies. c. People don't send messages about themselves via what they wear. d. It's unimportant for young people to wear clothes that are in style. 64. In some communities, a person might be judged by the brand of jeans he or she is putting on. True – False

You can find the names of colors in a lot of English expressions. Many of these expressions, however, talk about colors in very different ways. For example, the color red is often used to talk about things that are hot or exciting. You can listen to red-hot jazz music or eat red-hot chili peppers. If you roll out the red carpet for someone, you are giving them a big welcome. On TV, you may see stars walking on the red carpet at the opening night of a Hollywood movie or at the Academy Awards. After a big night like this, the stars often paint the town red, which means that they celebrate and have fun, going to parties or nightclubs all over the town. However, red isn't always fun.

If you do something embarrassing, like spill coffee on your teacher's desk, perhaps your face is beet-red. Your teacher's face might be red with anger, too! Or if you see a person doing something bad on purpose, like taking someone's wallet, you can say that you caught the person red-handed. Whether it's good or bad, red usually means something interesting is happening.
